Comments and Specific Points of Nonconcurrence on I. & R. Study of Procurement Procedures and Problems in TSS.

1. Reference paragraph 2, TSS/Admin has reinforced existing follow-up procedures in order to further cut down isolated cases in which long delay in securing requested equipment and supplies exist. While there will be isolated cases where delays will result due to such factors as the inability of manufacturer to supply equipment without a long lead time, TSS/Admin will in such cases immediately advise requisitioning officer of such delay and where possible attempt to secure a substitute item which will satisfy the needs of the requisitioning officer.

2. Reference paragraph 4a, TSS believes that the failure of the to maintain satisfactory accounting records thus resulting in their inability to meet Government and Agency requirements was due essentially to the failure of the contracting officer and/or auditors to adequately brief as to the type of accounting records necessary to meet Government and Agency auditing requirements. The delay in fiscal audits on completed contracts has created definite morale problems with our contractors and has in some cases resulted in actual financial hardship to the contractor. These difficulties, however, have been restricted to old contracts. Such difficulties have not been encountered in Fiscal Year 1953 contracts. TSS believes that the contractors are now being given adequate orientation by contracting officers and auditors.
